Monthly News from FAEA

From the President's Palette

March was a very creative and busy month as some of our FAEA members traveled to New Orleans, Louisiana for the NAEA Convention: The Art of Design. As always, members of the Visual Arts community came together from around the world to recharge their educational batteries. Between each and every attendee was weaved a common language developed by aligning the goals of feeder organizations with those of NAEA.

The core tenets of NAEA provide the framework for our own strategic plan, while local organizations at the county level provide the foundation for art educators to get involved in their own communities. Attending meetings, participating in conferences and workshops, and submitting presentation proposals are all ways to get more involved at each level, as well as to continue to grow as an art educator and member of the Visual Arts community.

We saw strong evidence of community involvement with March's celebration of Youth Art Month. Thank you for taking time to spread Visual Arts awareness in your own community. By doing so, you awaken and inspire the confidence and love of the arts in your students. Special thanks to FAEA Board Member, Pam Brown, for her hard work as Youth Art Month Chair. Our state flag and display sure did look fabulous in New Orleans!

Speaking of looking fabulous, three very special FAEA members made Florida exceptionally proud! Nan Williams received the NAEA 2015 Emeritus Art Educator of the Year! She was honored at the RAEA Awards Luncheon and gave a wonderful presentation. We have asked Nan to share her journey in October in Naples. Congratulations, once again, to Glenda Lubiner, Florida Art Educator of the Year, who was also honored at the Southeastern Awards Ceremony in NOLA. Such proud moments for our state!

FAEA is also extremely proud to recognize Jeff Broome, Assistant Professor of Art Education at Florida State University, as the new NAEA Higher Education Division Director-Elect! Jeff's term began at the conclusion of the convention in New Orleans. Congratulations, Jeff! Thank you for your leadership!

Now with April already here, FAEA has many ways for you to get involved! Student submissions for the K-12 Student Art Assessment and Virtual Exhibition are due TODAY! Board Nominations are being accepted until April 30th as we search for outstanding leaders, as well as, nominations for the 2015 FAEA Awards. Proposals are being accepted until May 22nd for our 63rd Annual FAEA Conference, to be held October 8-11 in Naples and registration will begin soon.
